

- Chronic Lyme Disease & Bartonella: Elaina Powell has suffered with the debilitating and bewildering effects of a parasitic bacterial infection that manifests in bizarre ways. Her official diagnosis is chronic Lyme disease and Bartonella, but even her specialist agrees her symptoms are unprecedented. Years of aggressive drug treatment have provided sporadic relief, and her doctors have been criticized for treating an illness the very authenticity of which many question. Strange affliction or teenage hysteria? Jay Schadler reports.

- Good Samaritan: Travis Forbes claimed to be the last person to help Kenia Monge as she drunkenly stumbled away from a downtown nightclub. But his story unraveled when surveillance cameras show him wheeling a sealed cooler into his workplace, putting on latex gloves, and turning off the security system. And still it would take another terrifying attack months later before detectives could lock him away for good. Chris Cuomo reports
- Toxic Neighbors: They say good fences make good neighbors. But what about video cameras and the internet? They are increasingly playing a role in neighborhood feuds. The results range from ridiculous bickering to high drama, all caught on camera and posted on the internet. But cameras can also document serious misbehavior, even neighbor-on-neighbor crimes. Jim Avila reports on this eye-opening trend.
- Pets: Not all "criminals" are human... meet some of the animal species who have had their mischievous acts caught on tape!
- Store Clerks Fighting Back: Internet video sites are loaded with surveillance camera scenes of armed robberies caught in the act. Some of those videos show clerks and even customers fighting back against the bad guys. What are the real consequences when victims attack? Deborah Roberts digs into the aftermath of two dramatic and violent armed robberies.

- Girl Crime Ring: An alleged Eastern European crime ring used sexy women to lure vacationing men into their questionable Miami nightclubs. Once inside, they got the men drunk and, investigators say, racked up huge and often fraudulent tabs on their credit cards. But one man who was victimized, TV weatherman John Bolaris, fought back and spurred an FBI investigation and bust. Chris Cuomo takes viewers inside the undercover investigation.
- Teacher vs. Student: Fifteen-year-old Julio Artuz claimed his teacher was verbally abusing him. His parents know that teachers have the hardest job in the world and are well trained to deal with classroom conflicts, so they doubted their son was telling them the truth. Julio needed proof, and with his parents' permission, he brought his cell phone to school. When he returned home, they couldn't believe what they saw. Cuomo reports.
- Video Pranks: What do you do when your significant other pranks you on camera and uploads the video to YouTube? In this day and age, you don't get mad...you get viral. That's exactly what the internet couple known only as Jess and Jeana have been doing to each other for the last six years in an epic prank war that has racked up over 150 million clicks on their YouTube page alone. John Berman gives viewers an inside look at their crazy take on love.
- Payback Trax: Chris Connelly profiles some of the best payback songs of recent memory -- songs written by the artists about the person who did them wrong -- and they want to whole world to know about it.

Friday, June 8, 2012

- Dominique Moceanu: Olympic gold medal gymnast Dominique Moceanu has written a memoir that exposes the underbelly of the sport that made her famous. In an exclusive interview she candidly talks to John Qui-ones about Bela and Marta Karolyi, the coaches who honed her amazing talent, her parents, family, friends and her life today as a wife and mother.
- Jerry Joseph: He was the basketball phenom destined to lead his new high school team to glory. But the mystery kid who showed up in Odessa, TX claiming to be a 15-year-old Haitian refugee was actually a mystery man - a 21-year-old drifter named Guerdwich Montimere looking for a new start... and a whole new life. Chris Cuomo has the first television interview with the hoop dreamer who was really an imposter.
- Real-life Norman Bates Case: For six years, Thomas Parkin implanted a bizarre scheme that involved him impersonating his dead mother, fooling the federal and state governments, banks and the court system to collect on her Social Security payments and committing housing fraud, since her death in 2003. Amy Robach talks to Parkin in his first interview since his conviction.
- Cancer Bride: A community rallies around a bride-to-be, bravely facing terminal cancer by throwing her a wedding to remember. But the cancer story turns out to be a fraud -- a sick hoax by a woman in perfect health. And she's not the only cancer faker. Elizabeth Vargas has the first exclusive TV interview with the blushing bride and also exposes other cases of cancer liars.

REVENGE FOR REAL: MURDER IN THE HAMPTONS

When millionaire Ted Ammon was brutally murdered in the bedroom of his East Hampton mansion in 2001, suspicion fell on his wife, Generosa and her boyfriend, Long Island electrician Danny Pelosi – who was eventually convicted of the crime. It is a twist to the sensational Hamptons murder case that casts new light on members of New York's high society.
